DEVICE TO GAIN TIME.

Latest Franchise Kite from Pretoria Fails of Effect.

LONDON, Aug. 19.—The latest franchise kite from Pretoria has failed of its expected effect, and is merely regarded as a device to gain time. There is no cessation of the war preparations on either side. The Transvaal government is beginning to move troops to the border and the police on the frontier have been ordered strictly to prohibit any cattle leaving the country, while the treasury of the republic is receiving large amounts of gold beyond ordinary requirements.

DRIVEN BACK TO MONTE CHRISTI.

Re-inforcements Sent to Suppress the Dominican Revolution Defeated.

CAPE HAYTIEN, Hayti, Aug. 19.—The re-inforcements of troops sent to the front by the government of Santo Domingo, in the efforts to suppress the revolution, have been defeated and driven back to Monte Christi.

NAVIGATOR WAS CARELESS.

Cable Ship Hooker Went Ashore in Daylight, on a Charted Reef.

MANILA, Aug. 19.—The board appointed to examine into the causes of the grounding of United States cable ship Hooker, which recently went ashore near the mouth of Corregidor harbor, at the entrance of Manila bay, finds that the accident occurred in daylight, on a reef shown on the chart and that there were evidences of carelessness on the part of the navigator of the vessel.

If no storm intervenes hopes are entertained that the vessel may be hauled off and repaired. Her hull has been badly torn by the coral reef on which she struck.

Prussian Lower House Rejects the Canal Bills.

BERLIN, Aug. 19.—The lower house of the Prussian Diet today rejected the entire canal bill, by a vote of 225 to 147, 32 of the members abstaining from voting. The bill for the Dortmund-Rhine canal alone was rejected by a vote of 225 to 134, three of the members abstaining from voting.

THE SCHNEIDER FORGERY.

As Usual, the Paris Press Takes Different Views of the Matter.

PARIS, Aug. 19.—The Paris papers are full of comments on Colonel Schneider's telegram. The Rennes correspondent of the Petit Bleu says: "General Mercier will protest against the allegation that the letter is a forgery. He declares that it is authenticated by comparison with other documents from the same source."

The Figaro says: "General Mercier's only way to prove his good faith is to name the person who gave him the document and to prove that this person got it in a legitimate way."

The Rappel says: "The Schneider forgery shows that in order to accumulate proofs against Dreyfus resort has been had to another Lemercier Picard."

M. Jaures, in the Petite Republique, demands an investigation of the Schneider matter.

The Echo De Paris says: "Such little foreign manoeuvres are intended to impose upon the court-martial and were quite expected."

STRICT BLOCKADE FORMED.

Authorities Begin a Regular Siege of M. Guerin.

PARIS, Aug. 19.—A strict blockade has been established in the Rue De Chabrol and the authorities have this morning begun a regular siege of the building in which M. Guerin and his Anti-Semite colleagues have entrenched themselves.

YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION NOTES.

The total number of men who have occupied beds at the naval branch of the Association since June 24 is 1,444. Although there was only a small liberty party ashore last night, 27 were accommodated. The total attendance is already more than 2,000. The average number of men occupying beds during the stay of the ships has been 48, and the average number while the ships were away five. There is still between $250 and $300 to be secured for this branch before September 18. There has been already received. From contributions on ships, $117.25; from donations ashore, $200; from receipts from lodging room, $257; total, $583.25.

Assistant Secretary Price and eight juniors are camping on the north shore of the Seaconnet river, together with 30 boys from the Fall River association.

In response to the annual appeal for financial assistance nearly $1,000 has already been received. Nearly $400 came from persons who had never previously contributed, while several who gave last year increased the amount of their donations. The Association was cleared from all indebtedness last October and strenuous efforts are being made to keep bills paid. Never before in the history of the work could so much be accomplished provided the financial support was forthcoming. $1 500 will be needed for this year, of which about $3,000 is in sight.

WAS CONTRADICTORY.

Major Cuignet's Evidence Punctured by Defense.

Dreyfus Vehemently Protests Against His Statements.

RENNES, Aug. 19.—No special incident occurred this morning when the second trial of Captain Alfred Dreyfus of the Fourteenth artillery, charged with treason, was resumed at the Lycee.

The first witness called today was Major Cuignet, formerly attached to the ministry of war. The witness, who declared he was convinced of the prisoner's guilt, was cross-examined by M. Demange, counsel for the defense, who succeeded in pointing out that several of his statements contradicted his previous depositions.

The president of the court, Colonel Jouaust, asked Dreyfus if he had anything to say, whereupon the prisoner rose and again vehemently protested against the denunciations leveled at him, an innocent man.

General De Boisdeffre was the next witness called. Following is the evidence in detail:

Major Cuignet, the first witness called, was not in uniform, as he is not at present attached to any corps. "Before beginning an account of the special investigations into the case which I was ordered to make by the ministers of war from M. Cavaignac to M. De Freycinet," said the witness, "I wish to mention a personal fact which, in conjunction with the evidence already heard, will constitute fresh proof of the prisoner's indiscreet behavior when employed on the headquarters staff. I was on the staff when Dreyfus was a probationer, during the latter half of 1893. Among other duties, I was connected with the railroad service and the mining of railroads, with the view of interrupting traffic, in case of need. It is hardly necessary to point out the secret character of such matters.

"Dreyfus, who was a probationer on the eastern railroads, had been ordered to specially study the mining on them and possessed information relating solely to them. One day Dreyfus asked me to give him the general scheme of mining which I possessed, giving as a reason for his request that he was anxious to increase his knowledge and that it was necessary for him to know the general scheme in order to properly carry out the work entrusted to him. I replied that I did not see the necessity of giving him the scheme and that, in any case, he had better apply to his own chief, Major Bertin. Dreyfus pretended that Bertin would not impart any information. Day after day he pestered me, so that, finally, having no reason to distrust him, I began giving him explanations. Dreyfus displayed the keenest interest and took copious notes. When later his house was searched, these notes were not discoverable. I don't know what became of them, but it is difficult to believe that they were destroyed, considering the importance he seemed to attach to the information and the persistence shown in procuring it."

After launching the above declaration, which he apparently considered to be weighty evidence of the treachery of Dreyfus, Major Cuignet proceeded to recount in detail the task which General Gonse assigned to him in May, 1898, of classifying the documents in the Dreyfus, Esterhazy and Picquart cases.

"The first question I will ask here, is," said the witness, "is Dreyfus guilty? My conviction of his guilt is based on these grounds:

"First, his confessions to Captain Lebrun-Renault; second, the technical nature of the contents of the bordereau, and third, the results of the examination of the secret dossier. I will add to these three points the evidence of the expert Bertillon (Laughter) and, as indirect proof, the members employed by the Dreyfus family to secure the prisoner's rehabilitation. I protest that a campaign has been undertaken against justice throughout our country." The major's outburst of heroics evoked cynical smiles and indications of dissent, coupled with marks of assent from the assembled generals.

The witness next spoke of the secret dossier of the war ministry, containing information relating to the interview between M. Tearieux, former minister of justice, and Count Tornielli, the Italian ambassador, "which country," said Cuignet, "benefited by the treachery."

Regarding the confessions said to have been made to Captain Lebrun-Renault, witness said he still believed they were authentic, adding: "If people do not believe the confessions made to Captain Lebrun-Renault they will believe no human testimony."

Continuing, the witness re-asserted that the bordereau was written by Dreyfus at the end of August, and, incidentally, the major protested against Colonel Picquart's insinuations against Du Paty De Clam. He then returned to the secret dossier of the war office, from which, he declared, the court was sure to draw important deductions.

"The first portion of the dossier," he said, "shows that, in 1893, there was a constant leakage in the ministry of war. We have had proofs of the plans of fortifications reaching the hands of a foreign power. It is known to a certainty, from the letter of an agent of the foreign power, that the stolen plans emanated from the ministry of war. A vast network of espionage had, therefore, been organized against us, headed by agents belonging to the same power as 'A,' Colonel Schwartzkoppen, the German military attache, the agents of other powers also collaborating."

Witness then invited the court's special attention to this dossier, in which, he said, would be found ample proof of the prisoner's guilt. At this stage of the proceedings Dreyfus promptly rose and interrupted the witness, shouting: "That is a manifest lie."

After this the witness recited in detail his reasons for the belief that the agent supplying the information was a French staff officer. He then endeavored to show that traffic with foreign military attaches could only have been carried on by a probationer in the department occupied by Dreyfus. The witness specially referred to the Panizzardi telegram of November 2, 1894, which, he explained, left an impression on him that in 1891 Dreyfus was an old friend of the Italian government.

Another document of the dossier, according to Major Cuignet, showed beyond dispute that the bordereau actually passed through the hands of Colonel Schwartzkoppen. This, to the witness, established the authenticity of the bordereau and the examination of which, he pointed out, proved that Schwartzkoppen and Panizzardi had the closest relations in all matters of espionage.

Referring next to the despatch of Colonel Schneider, former Austrian military attache at Paris, denouncing as a forgery a letter purporting to have been written by the attache, in which he was represented as referring to efforts being made by Schwartzkoppen and Panizzardi to conceal their relations with Dreyfus, witness maintained General Mercier's statements on the subject were correct and that the authenticity of the letter had been proved. The intelligence department, he added, held other documents from the same attache in its possession.

Major Cuignet pointed out that the Schneider document was included in the dossier and that M. Chamain, who had the secret documents in his charge, had shown it to the court in behalf of the ministry of war. Therefore, witness said, Colonel Schneider's contradiction was really addressed to the French government. (Sensation). "Besides," added Cuignet, "I wish to point out that the attache issuing the denial is a person of somewhat less consequence than his allies. It is impossible, therefore, that this denial was imposed upon him." (Renewed sensation).

The major dwelt admiringly on the conclusions of M. Bertillon that Esterhazy had learned to imitate the handwriting of the bordereau after its publication in the Matin. He then reviewed the police reports on Dreyfus.

Replying to a question of the court, Cuignet described the circumstances of the discovery of the Henry forgery and how it was that the probationers did not participate in the manoeuvres of 1894, although they had long believed they would attend.

Major Carriere, the government's commissary, at this juncture said he thought it desirable to remark, as the representative of the government, that he must not be understood to endorse all Major Cuignet had said with reference to "a foreign military officer who at the present moment held a diplomatic appointment in France." (Sensation).

Replying to M. Demange, Major Cuignet insisted that if Henry committed forgery "it was in the interests of the country."

To this statement counsel retorted: "You did not say that to the court of cassation."

At the request of M. Demange, the major's deposition before the court of cassation, relating to Henry's motives and Paty De Clam's share in the preparation of the forgery, was read. It showed that Cuignet emphatically declared before the court of cassation that he was convinced an investigation would easily show that Paty De Clam was the principal author of the Henry forgery. Witness claimed he thought he was doing his duty "in saying all that is in my mind."

"Do you adhere," asked counsel, "to all you said before the full court of cassation?"

This question confused the witness, who attempted to explain by saying he was "only arguing at that time" and it was not for him to judge Paty De Clam.

M. Demange pointed out that, in spite of the arguments Major Cuignet had advanced against Paty De Clam, the military judge, Tavernier, threw out the case. "Now," added M. Demange, "Major Cuignet has advanced as much against Dreyfus. The court will be able to appreciate the value of his arguments."

Counsel then asked why Cuignet had employed the expression "report," to describe the Schneider letter, and the witness replied that he was justified in doing so, owing to the similarity of the expressions in it with the terms usually employed in reports.

M. Demange pointed out that the document included in the dossier contained the word "report."

"Does the original," he asked, "contain this word?"

"No," replied the witness.

Replying further, Cuignet said the document also referred to the campaign in favor of Dreyfus and to orders sent to Brussels, the headquarters of the espionage system.

M. Demange—"The paper handed in by General Mercier is therefore only an extract."

The witness next aired his idea as to how Dreyfus might have secured plans of the fortress. But counsel pointed to Paty De Clam's report at the time of the arrest of Dreyfus, in which he declared that no documents had disappeared or could have disappeared from the ministry of war.

When Dreyfus was asked if he wished to reply to this witness, he declared he had never asked Major Cuignet for documents except by the desire of his chief, Major Bertin. "All the details which Major Cuignet has given on this subject," said the prisoner, "sprang out of his own imagination and are due to the same state of mind which prompts unreasoning bitterness even against an innocent man."

Amid a buzz of excitement the name of Major Du Paty De Clam was called out, whereupon Major Carriere said Paty De Clam had been officially informed that his presence was necessary to the court-martial and it was hoped he would be able to come as soon as possible, but the government commissary had heard nothing from him since the notification was sent.

At the request of M. Demange, it was decided to notify Paty De Clam that the court-martial was ready to hear his deposition.

There was a further thrill of curiosity when General De Boisdeffre, former chief of the general staff of the French army, advanced to the witness box. The general remarked that in view of the exhaustive evidence already given he would try to be brief. He hurriedly reviewed the leakage in the ministry of war, the discovery of the bordereau, the arrest and trial of Dreyfus and the latter's alleged confessions, before the ceremony of degradation, to Captain Lebrun-Renault. Witness said he believed the confessions were genuine. He next referred to Colonel Picquart's appearance in the intelligence department, although witness hesitated to appoint him because he thought Picquart too self-confident and not sufficiently deferential towards his chiefs.

"It has been said," continued General De Boisdeffre, "that a secret package of papers was shown the judges of the court-martial of 1894. I positively assert that, so far as I am concerned, I never ordered Colonel Picquart to convey any envelope to Colonel Maurel. I may add that Colonel Picquart never doubted the guilt of Dreyfus and never even expressed doubts of his guilt when he took over the duties of chief of the intelligence department. The first instructions I gave him were to follow up the Dreyfus affair, and it is well known what was the result of these instructions."

The general next described the interviews between himself and Colonel Picquart, when the latter first mentioned Esterhazy, without, however, connecting him with the Dreyfus affair. Witness discredited Colonel Picquart's statement that the latter asked him not to mention the investigation to General Gonse. "General Gonse," said Boisdeffre, "is a friend of 30 years' standing. I have always had the greatest confidence in him and should certainly not have entertained a request to leave him in ignorance of what was occurring."

General De Boisdeffre, whose evidence was attentively followed, especially by the members of the court-martial, then related the incidents of his interviews with Picquart; how he sent the latter to see General Gonse and General Gonse's subsequent letter to the witness advising a continuance of the investigations regarding Esterhazy, but adding that the affair must not be mixed up with the Dreyfus affair. As Colonel Picquart persisted in trying to hurry matters and was neglecting his other duties, the witness proposed to the minister of war to send him, not in disgrace, on a mission to Tongnia, but the minister of war, the general asserted, found another mission for him.

Everything, the general added, went on quietly for a year, until M. Scheurer-Kestner, one of the vice presidents of the senate at that time, intervened. This was followed by the denunciation of Esterhazy by Matthew Dreyfus and the inquiry into Esterhazy's proceedings. "At that time," the witness said, "I was convinced of the guilt of Dreyfus, and this conviction is as strong today as ever." (Sensation)

"I regard it as an abominable crime," continued the general, "to have endeavored to substitute for him a man of straw, however disreputable he may have been and whatever his offenses, which in any case would not lessen the guilt of Dreyfus. My conviction is the same as at the commencement of the affair. Esterhazy, it is true, at a certain psychological and singularly well chosen moment confessed to having written the bordereau. But he has made many other statements. He is always telling lies. What is certain is that he could never have delivered the documents enumerated in the bordereau."

Then the witness briefly referred to the trial and acquittal of Esterhazy and the

JIMINEZ ARRESTED.

Taken into Custody from a Steamer at Cienfuegos.

HAVANA, Aug. 18.—The military authorities here telegraphed to Cienfuegos this week, instructing Captain Stamper, collector of customs there, to ascertain whether or not Jiminez was on the Mexicoles steamer, and to take him into custody if found.

Just as the steamer was about leaving Cienfuegos Captain Stamper boarded Jiminez and arrested him, despite the fact that Jiminez denounced the arrest as an outrage, and said he had broken no law and would yield only to force. Captain Stamper replied that he was ready to use force if necessary, and Jiminez then yielded, remarking that he did so only because he could not help himself.

The mayor of Cienfuegos, Senor Frias, refused to make the arrest, saying that General Jiminez was an old personal friend, and when Jiminez was taken into custody Senor Frias was found, with a police inspector, in close conversation with the general and the latter's secretary urging him, it is thought, to leave the steamer, conceal himself and wait for a better opportunity.

Captain Stamper informed Jiminez that he would make him as comfortable as possible, and after Jiminez and his secretary had packed their trunks they were driven, accompanied by the chief of police and Captain Stamper, to the Union Hotel, where two bedrooms and a dining room were placed at their disposal. General Jiminez will be kept under police charge until further advices are received from the governor general.

There is much excitement among the people of Cienfuegos over the incident. The feeling is generally expressed that the authorities had no right to arrest Jiminez, an unarmed citizen, going, apparently, to Santiago de Cuba, and the point is even made that even if he were going to San Domingo he would only be returning to his native country.

Senor Aybar, a representative of Jiminez, left Cienfuegos for Santiago de Cuba last Tuesday, after remaining at the former place 60 days. It is believed he tried to fit out an expedition, as a small schooner was found lying outside the harbor, supposed to be awaiting a cargo of ammunition. Aybar had taken out clearance papers for Key West several days before.

Rapidly Recruiting Expeditions in Cuba to Go to San Domingo.

SANTIAGO DE CUBA, Aug. 18.—Agents of the Dominican insurgents are rapidly recruiting expeditions in this part of the island, particularly on the north coast. Orders were received from Havana today to hold the men recently enlisted at Baracoa, pending an investigation. All trading schooners are closely watched. Yesterday the Adonis was seized and sent to Guantanamo to patrol the coast.

It is certain that several expeditions got away without any interference, but General Leonard Wood is determined to do all in his power to enforce neutrality.

Steamer Rambler went ashore at Sabin's point at 9:30 o'clock last night during a dense fog. It was low tide, and she ran upon the mud bank about 200 feet, being left almost high and dry when the tide reached its lowest ebb. She remained there all night and was not expected to reach her home dock much before 5 o'clock this morning. On board was a party of 500 excursionists, who chartered the boat for a moonlight sail. Steamer Favorite started from Providence for Newport with a moonlight excursion, but her captain refused to go farther than Bullock's point. On the way back she ran aground twice in the vicinity of Field's point, but each time managed to back off. She did not land her passengers at the dock until nearly 2 o'clock this morning. All the accidents were caused by the heavy fog.

The police of the Riverside district of East Providence experienced the worst day of the season Thursday in the discharge of their duty and the maintenance of order at Crescent Park. There was a large excursion from Fall River, and early in the afternoon there was a disposition on the part of some of the crowd to run things to suit themselves. Numerous fights were started, but the participants in nearly every instance were got out of the way before the police could arrive. One officer was badly cut about the head and body in his efforts to arrest one of the men.

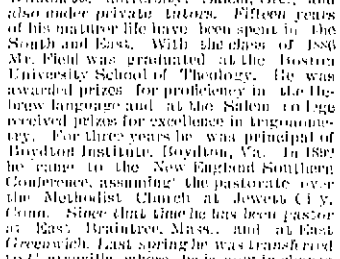

While it seems perfectly natural that the state of Rhode Island should have a claim against the government for equipments furnished to the men sent out during the war with spain, it seems a little out of the usual that the state should now be trying to collect a bill the principal of which was incurred by the government during the civil war, when the state furnished equipments and supplies to the regiments. The state of Rhode Island is now trying to collect the interest which it claims to be due and which is no small amount, footing up to a total of $341,263.41. The claim has recently been under consideration by the United States court of claims, the last session of the court being held yesterday at the office of General Treasurer Read. Two sessions were required to present the claims in full to the court.

Rev. Ambrie Field, who was elected principal of East Greenwich Academy at a meeting of the board of directors last Tuesday, yesterday afternoon sent his acceptance to the directors. Rev Mr. Field was born in Michigan in August, 1856, 33 years ago. At an early age he removed to Oregon and acquired much of his school education in that state. He studied at Willamette university, Salem, Ore., and also under private tutors. Fifteen years of his maturer life have been spent in the South and East. With the class of 1886 Mr. Field was graduated at the Boston University School of Theology. He was awarded prizes for proficiency in the Hebrew language and at the Salem college received prizes for excellence in trigonometry. For three years he was principal of Boydton Institute, Boydton, Va. In 1892 he came to the New England Southern Conference, assuming the pastorate over the Methodist Church at Jewett City, Conn. Since that time he has been pastor at East Braintree, Mass., and at East Greenwich. Last spring he was transferred to Centreville, where he is now in charge of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Steam Annie, A. W. Krauseof New London for Edgartown, laden with 100 bushels of round clams, stranded one mile east of Quonochontaug life saving station yesterday. She was discovered by Surfman Howard Wilcox 15 minutes later, who notified Captain Saunders and his crew, who went to the scene of the disaster with their apparatus, arriving at 2:05 a. m. They found that the crew, Captain Krause and his companion, Henry A. Pease, had landed by climbing over the bowsprit and waiting ashore as the seas ran back. A heavy sea was on and the prospects of saving the vessel were unfavorable. She is full of water. The crew are at the life station.

The Torrey Prospecting and Mining Company of Bristol has begun sinking a well on the company's land in the southeast part of the town. The water is to be used in working the surface of land there for gold, which was discovered in small quantities through this section two years ago. A vein of quartz three feet wide has been encountered working for the well. This quartz is being removed with dynamite.

Miss Annie L. Bosworth, a former resident of Woonsocket, and for some years professor of mathematics at the Rhode Island College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts, has been studying since May of last year in Germany. The University of Goettingen has just conferred upon her the degree of doctor of philosophy, "magna cum laude." Miss Bosworth has twice lectured before the mathematical seminar on subjects assigned by the professor and her work has been highly commended.

Pe-ru-na Came to the Rescue and Made Them Strong and Happy.

Mrs. M. M. King, Waterloo, N. C.

"I was afflicted for twenty years and did not know what ailed me. My husband employed three doctors, but they did me no good. I took different kinds of medicine, all to no effect. In 1895 a friend told me I had catarrh. I had a bad cough and running at the nose all the time. I was advised to try Pe-ru-na and I took four bottles. I can now well of the catarrh. I believe Pe-ru-na saved my life. The doctors and all others failed. I can recommend your Pe-ru-na to all my friends. It is the best medicine in the world. You may use my name whenever you please."—Mrs. M. M. King.

Dr. Hartman's free treatment for chronic catarrh has been the means of restoring a great multitude of discouraged, hopeless women to health. The following is a specimen recently received from Mary F. Bartholomew, St. Francisville, Ill. She says:

"About twelve years ago I was afflicted with female trouble (systemic catarrh.) I doctored with several skillful physicians, but kept getting worse until I became bedfast. I remained in this condition about two years, under the attendance of four physicians.

I concluded I would write Dr. Hartman for advice. I owe my life to Dr. Hartman and Pe-ru-na. My friends and neighbors never expected to see me well again. I am now able to assist with my household duties.

I think my recovery is a surprise to every one who knew me. My appetite was so poor I could eat scarcely anything; but I can eat any and everything now without pain. I cannot recommend your medicines enough.

Catarrh is the bane of womankind. Nearly every case of so called female complaint is due to catarrh of the pelvic organs. A woman free from catarrh is generally a well woman. Catarrh of the pelvic organs makes more women miserable than all other diseases combined.

For Dr. Hartman's latest book on female diseases, address The Pe-ru-na Drug Manufacturing Company, Columbus, Ohio. Sent free for a short time.

Remember that cholera morbus, cholera infantum, summer complaint, bilious colic, diarrhœa and dysentery are each and all catarrh of the bowels. Catarrh is the only correct name for these affections. Pe-ru-na is an absolute specific for these ailments, which are so common in summer. Dr. Hartman, in a practice of over forty years, never lost a single case of cholera infantum, dysentery, diarrhœa, or cholera morbus, and his only remedy was Pe-ru-na. Those desiring further particulars should send for a free copy of "Summer Catarrh." Address, Dr. Hartman, Columbus, O.

GUZMAN BLANCO'S CAREER.

Had Guzman Blanco died 10 years ago, his death would have created a far greater stir, and would have presaged a revolution in Venezuela. But for the past 10 years he has not been a figure of any political importance, though his vast wealth and his magnificent entertainments have added to the gayety of Paris, and in that centre of gayeties he will undoubtedly be missed much more than in his own country of Venezuela. He has been one of those Americans who have set out to see Paris and die, and he has successfully accomplished his mission.

His career was picturesque and remarkable. He was born in the city of Caracas in 1829, and was the son of Dr. Antonio Guzman, who was for nearly 50 years a considerable figure in Venezuela politics. When the younger Guzman became a general he added his mother's name, Blanco, to his patronymic, in order to distinguish himself from his father. He was educated at the University of Caracas, and when quite a young man distinguished himself as a soldier, and was one of the leaders in the revolution which set Venezuela free from the tyranny which she had suffered for many years. He held several military and civil offices, and after having been obliged to flee the country he returned to Venezuela in 1870 at the head of an army of invasion.

The old liberal party flocked to his standard, and after some stubborn fighting Blanco took possession of the capital and was declared dictator. Two years later his authority was acknowledged by the entire country, and in 1873 he was elected constitutional president.

From that time until 1889 he ruled with absolute authority, but at the same time he led the nation into the paths of progress. Public credit was restored, railroads were built, schools multiplied, and the natural resources of the country were developed. To be sure, Blanco did not hesitate to feather his own nest, but the standard of political and personal morality is not so high in the tropics as in temperate zones. Nearly every ruler in Venezuela has obtained his authority through force of arms or conspiracy, and it cannot be questioned that under the rule of Guzman Blanco Venezuela made greater progress and took a higher stand among the nations of the earth than under any of his predecessors. A foreigner and man of note who had long resided in Caracas said of Blanco's administration of affairs:

"When there was $10,000,000 in the treasury Guzman expended eight for the benefit of the people and stole two; most of the presidents would have stolen eight and left two."

Intelligence, vanity, determination, these were the chief characteristics of Guzman Blanco. He filled the country with his name in more ways than one, for he erected many statues to himself, filled public buildings with his portraits and christened innumerable parks and market houses. He instituted four public holidays in his own honor, and on each of these holidays he had his statue on El Calvario brilliantly illuminated. Around the pedestal of this statue was a fence made of muskets captured by Blanco during the war that led to his dictatorship, and on his holidays a candle was placed in the muzzle of each. Wires were stretched between this fence and the base of the statue, which upon these occasions were loaded with lamps, and the bronze figure of "The Illustrious American," as Blanco styled himself, rose like a phoenix out of a sea of fire.

But the processions were stopped, and the statues were tumbled from their pedestals in 1889, which same year saw the departure of "the Illustrious American" for Paris. The restless people had grown tired of his imperious ways and inordinate vanity. For 19 years he had held absolute sway, for though the constitution prevented him from being his own successor, so that he was the de facto president only during alternate terms, still he was always the real power. During the intervals a substitute selected by himself filled the executive chair, while Blanco spent most of the time in Europe, with the credentials of a minister plenipotentiary, yet still directing the policy of the government by mail and cable. Despite his vanity and his love of wealth and power, he was the most successful ruler that Venezuela has ever known.

Realizing that his power was on the wane, Blanco left Venezuela at the close of his last presidential term and never returned to his native country. He purchased a palace in Paris, where he gave lavish entertainments. One of his daughters married the Duc de Morny. He was a memorable figure in Paris, and Paris will miss him more than will Venezuela. For in his own country he had played his part, and when the curtain fell there were no cries for an encore.

THE STATE LINE RE-MARKED.

The work of establishing the boundaries between Rhode Island and Massachusetts has been finished. The work has been the labor of years and the disputed territory has been the cause of wrangling for more than 200 years. Many commissioners have reported on various portions of the line and lawsuits have been numerous. Two years ago it was determined by the authorities of both states to settle the boundary line for all time. To that end legislation was enacted by both states and engineers set to work. In adjusting the boundaries the exchange of territory has been about an even thing.

Some laughable incidents have cropped out over the transfer of territory from one state to another. A farmer who always supposed he lived in Cumberland finds that he is now a citizen of Massachusetts and a taxpayer in Attleboro. He kicked lustily over the change and vowed he would not live in Attleboro. He found, however, that the state of Massachusetts is too big a power for one man to successfully buck against, and so he is trying to reconcile himself to the fate which divorces him and most of his farm from Rhode Island.

A few ancient monuments were found, the first being on the line between Attleboro and Pawtucket, near the westerly slope of the banks of the Seven Mile river. This is a large slate stone, set on edge. It is about four feet out of the ground, 1½ feet wide and about one foot thick, and is inscribed with ancient looking letters, R. E. II. and R. on the south side and A on the north side, and was apparently placed in position to mark the line between Rehoboth and Attleboro, previous to 1828, at which date Pawtucket was set off from Rehoboth. The old stone was found to be 220 feet south of the state line, but was allowed to remain in its original position, a new marker being placed nearly opposite on the line. The second was an old slate stone nearly on the state line and at the corner of the towns of Seekonk and Swansea. The stone was lettered S. and 1759 on the south side, and was replaced by one of the new stone monuments. The third, at King's Rock, had apparently been quarried from the ledge nearby; it bears no inscription and was left standing, in its original position, 0.8 feet south of the line.

WILD LIFE ON THE HUDSON.

Three or four years ago John Burroughs got tired of the panoramic view of the Hudson from his doorstep at West Park, and retreated to a spot a mile inland, where he has since lived, in great contentment, in an humble, slab-sided cabin. So delightful is his description of this rustic home, that every reader will feel like invading his privacy and trying to get as much pleasure from his simple surroundings as this veteran nature-lover does:

"Friends have often asked me why I turned my back upon the Hudson and retreated into the wilderness. Well, I do not call it a retreat; I call it a withdrawal, a retirement; the taking up of a new position to renew the attack, it may be, more vigorously than ever. It is not always easy to give reasons. There are reasons within reasons, and often no reasons at all that we are aware of.

"To a countryman like myself, not born to a great river or an extensive waterview, these things, I think, pall upon him after a time. He gets surfeited with a beauty that is alive to him. He longs for something more homely, private, and secluded. Scenery may be too fine or too grand and imposing for one's daily and hourly view. It tires after a while. It demands a mood that comes to you only at intervals. Hence it is never wise to build your house on the most ambitious spot in the landscape. Rather seek out a more humble and secluded nook or corner which you can fill and warm with your domestic and home instincts and affections. In some things the half is often more satisfying than the whole. A glimpse of the Hudson river between hills or through openings in the trees wears better with me than a long expanse of it constantly spread out before me.

One day I had an errand to a farmhouse nestled in a little valley or basin at the foot of a mountain. The earth put out protecting arms all about it—a low hill with an orchard on one side, a sloping pasture on another, and the mountain, with the skirts of its mantling forests, close at hand on the other. How my heart warmed toward it! I had been so long perched high upon the banks of a great river, in sight of all the world, exposed to every wind that blows, with a horizon line that swept over half a county, that, quite unconsciously to myself, I was pining for a nook to sit down in. I was hungry for the private and the circumscribed; I knew it when I saw this sheltered farmstead. I had long been restless and dissatisfied—a vague kind of homesickness. Now I knew the remedy.

"Hence, when, not long afterward, I was offered a tract of wild land, barely a mile from home, that contained a secluded nook and a few acres of level, fertile land shut off from the vain and noisy world of railroads, steamboats and yachts by a wooded, precipitous mountain, I quickly closed the bargain and built me a rustic house there, which I call 'Slabsides,' because its outer walls are covered with slabs. I might have given it a prettier name, but not one more fit or more in keeping with the wood that brought me thither. A slab is the first cut from the log, and the bark goes with it. It is like the first cut from the loaf, which we call the crust, and which the children reject, but which we older ones often prefer. I wanted to take a fresh cut of life—something that had the bark on, or if you please, that was like a well-browned and hardened crust. After three years I am satisfied with the experiment. Life has a different flavor; its complex equations all disappear. The exact value of it may still puzzle us, but we can press it close; we have shorn it of many of its disguises and entanglements."—[Century Magazine.

AMERICANS MISUNDERSTOOD BY GERMANS.

How has it happened that the real America is still as undiscovered by the educated German as if Columbus had never crossed the ocean? The German immigrant can justly claim to be a respectable and very desirable element of the American population; he has stood always on the side of solid work and honesty; he has brought skill and energy over the ocean, and he has not forgotten his music and his joyfulness; he is not second to any one in his devotion to the duties of a citizen in peace and in war, and without his aid many of America's industrial, commercial and technical triumphs would be unknown. But all that does not disprove the fact that he is somewhat unfit to form a fair judgment on the life which surrounds him. First, he belongs almost always to a social stratum in which the attention is wholly absorbed by the external life of a country, and which is without feeling for the achievements of its mental life; he was poor in his fatherland, and lives comfortably here, and thus he is enthusiastic over the material life, praises the railroads and hotels, the bridges and mills, but does not even try to judge of the libraries and universities, the museums and the hospitals.

On the other hand, he feels socially in the background; he is the Dutchman, who through his bad English, through his habits and manners, through his tastes and pleasures, is different from the majority, and therefore set apart as a citizen of second rank—if not slighted, at least kept in social isolation. The effect of this situation is on the German side an entire ignorance of the Anglo-American life; he may go his way here for 30 years without ever breaking bread at the table of anyone outside of the German circle; he may have even become rich, and yet he is not quite in the social current. * * * And worst of all, in this atmosphere live nearly all those journalists, from the editor to the penny-a-liner, who fill the 800 German-American newspapers and supply most of the papers in Germany.—[Professor Hugo Munsterberg, in the Atlantic.

MY OLD WOMAN AND I.

We have crossed the bridge o'er the middle of life,
My old woman and I;
Taking our share in the calm and strife,
With the travelers passing by;
And though on our pathway the shadows are rife,
There's a light in the western sky.

Some losses and crosses, of course, we've had,
My old woman and I;
But, bless you! we never found time to be sad,
And a very good reason why.
We were busy as bees, and we weren't so mad
As to stop in our work and cry.

On our changeable road as we journeyed along,
My old woman and I,
The kindly companions we met in the throng
Made our lives like a vision fly;
And, therefore, the few that imagined us wrong
Scarcely cost us a single sigh.

The weak and the weary we've striven to cheer,
My old woman and I;
For each of us thought that our duty while here
Was to do as we'd be done by.
In the hope to exhibit a balance clear
When the reckoning day is nigh.

When the Bright Child drew near to the rhinoceros in the circus, all the world wondered and listened, agape. The world laughed at this point, until it almost split, there being no doubt that the Bright Child had reference to the rhinoceros's hide not fitting very well.—[Detroit Journal.

His father, a skillful wood carver, emigrated with his family in 1851 to the United States, but in 1857 removed to England and settled in Southampton. At the age of 13 Hubert entered the Art School at Southampton, where he won a bronze medal. In 1865 he went to Munich and was aided in his studies by Professor Echter. He afterward attended the schools at South Kensington and Southampton, and subsequently went to London and occupied himself successfully with water-color painting. He was elected an Associate of the Royal Academy in 1879, and in the same year was elected an honorary member of the Imperial Academy of Vienna. In 1886 he obtained at the Berlin Exhibition one of the "Great Gold Medals" for art. He was created an Officer of the Legion of Honor for his services in connection with the Paris Exhibition in 1889, and the honor of Royal Academician was conferred on him in 1890.

DO IT YOURSELF.

It is easy to tell whether your Kidneys are diseased. Take a bottle or glass tumbler and fill it with urine. If there is a sediment—a powder-like substance—after standing a day and night, there is something wrong with the Kidneys. Other sure signs of disease are a desire to urinate often, pain in the back, or if your urine stains linen.

There is no question that Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is the best and surest medicine in the world for diseases of the Kidneys, Liver, Bladder and Blood, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia and Chronic Constipation. It quickly relieves and cures inability to hold urine and the necessity of getting up a number of times during the night. It puts an end to that scalding pain when passing urine and corrects the bad effects of whiskey and beer. It is sold for one dollar a bottle at all drug stores.

Send your full postoffice address to the DR. DAVID KENNEDY CORPORATION, Rondout, N. Y., and mention this paper. They will then mail you a trial bottle of Favorite Remedy and a valuable medical pamphlet free, giving full direction for its use. Every reader of the Newport Daily News can depend upon the genuineness of this liberal offer, and all sufferers from the diseases mentioned above should take advantage of it at once.

If the Eye Could Speak

It would always object to the use of cheap, imperfect glasses, that are sold by the inexperienced or traveling "fakes." Such glasses in the end are the most expensive articles ever purchased. The one way and the only way to get glasses especially adapted for your sight is by an examination by artificial light, by which the various tests are made. Fitting glasses in a thorough manner is my method.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 19, 1899.

A FALL RIVER MILL DEAL.

Fall River is not actually "struck dumb" by the proposition made for the purchase of its cloth mills and their consolidation under one management, but quite the contrary. The News of last evening says: "Naturally the print cloth mills deal forms the only subject that is receiving serious attention in the talk about town just now. The men who are credited with being inside on the deal are saying nothing. Those on the outside are united in the opinion that there is a big thing under way. Opinions differ as to whether the deal will be brought to a successful finish, but the general idea among stockholders, so far as it can be gathered, is favorable to selling at the prices given. The rule is that cash will be demanded. It has been stated on good authority that the terms of the syndicate will be cash, if required. Whether or not securities of the syndicate will later be offered in full or part payment is a matter concerning which all interested, and outside the deal, are equally free to guess."

The magnitude of the proposed deal is enormous, and very naturally creates great excitement in that city among all classes. As stated before, the number of manufacturing establishments included in the offer is 29, and the total capital stock at par value is $17,063,200, but it is believed that other mills will fall into line, including some of the largest in the town, and eventually be included in the list. The proposed capital of the syndicate or trust is $35,000,000. The difference between these figures being premium on stocks purchased, expenses incurred and special profits to the promoters and contractors. This, of course, is a pretty liberal estimate of the advantages to be gained, but it is probably fully justified by the conditions.

Since the announcement of the first syndicate making the bid for these mills, two other trusts or syndicates have come upon the scene, and it is understood that they will enter the competition for the purchase. One of these is a company which proposes to consolidate all the mills of the country in a common trust, with a capital of $120,000,000 to $135,000,000. And it is said that the representative of a New York syndicate also is on the ground making mysterious inquiries and investigating values, possibly preparatory to an approach from another direction. Taking all in all, Fall River now has the most interesting chapter in its remarkable history, and whether success crowns either of these efforts or not, one of the most exciting.

THE GAMBLERS' STRONGHOLD.

The Chicago News has announced the fact that the small politician is the virtual strength of the gambling fraternity, whether it be in the direction of slot machines or other forms of the vice. Now it sometimes happens, as is well understood, that these "small politicians" are represented in the city government, and occasionally it occurs that they are supreme in that direction. The News gives it as its opinion that this cannot be regarded as a great discovery in any quarter, and says:

"The public has long known that there was never a gambler or all-night saloon keeper in trouble but some professional ward politician was up at police headquarters coaxing and threatening to get the culprit off. Whatever power inheres in political machines in times when there is no campaign is invariably exerted in favor of this sort of lawbreakers and an almost unbroken record testifies that it has been exerted to much purpose up to this time. Gambling has always flourished specifically by grace of the professional politician and the all-night saloon still flourishes by his favor.

"But a discovery, within the city hall, of the intimate relations between gambling and ward politics may be of some moment. Now that Chief Ripley has clearly discerned the alliance, it must occur to him that it is not a mere coincidence; that the politicians are not the gamblers' friends for nothing and that the chief of police who permits himself to be used and brought into disrepute by the politicians merely to help on the latter in their profitable alliance with the gamblers is a very short-sighted man."

REV. WILLIAM BUTLER.

The death of Dr. William Butler is announced as having occurred at Newton Centre, Mass., last night. It may be remembered by some of his friends that a few weeks since he celebrated his eightieth birthday, which was made an occasion of considerable interest. Few men have been more conspicuous in religious enterprises than he. Born in Ireland in 1818, he came to this country in 1839 and entered upon ministerial work. Later he founded the missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church in India, which has been one of the most prolific fields of enterprise in that denomination. Dr. Butler, since his return, assisted Bishop McCabe in his effort to raise "a million dollars for missions," which became a rallying cry throughout the whole church. Still later he proceeded to Mexico and founded the prosperous mission in that republic, of which his son is the present head.

Either of these enterprises properly prosecuted would be sufficient to render any man conspicuous, but Dr. Butler has in other ways been eminently successful in religious and charitable work. He was an author as well as a preacher, and some of his books have had wide circulation, especially those that relate to his former missionary fields. It must have afforded supreme satisfaction to have been able to look backward upon his former sphere of operations and contemplate the fields he had helped to cultivate with nearly or quite 100,000 Methodists in India and 10,000 in Mexico.

THE PRICE OF MEAT.

It is suggested that the advance in prices for meat products is likely to bring its own correction in a short time. Already an influx of cattle is expected at Chicago, due to the recent increase in charges, and these prices are certain to stimulate cattle growing another season, just as increase in the price of wheat and other cereals has caused the planting of a larger acreage of those staples. On account of the panic of 1893-95 there has been a diminished demand for meat during the last few years, and as a result breeders of cattle made little effort to increase their stocks. The effort would not have been profitable, and now that prosperity has caused an increased consumption of necessaries, they find the supply of cattle to be inadequate to the demand. This knowledge is all that is needed to increase the supply of cattle, and hence of meat.

An Ohio mayor has fined himself $5 for assault and battery, he having lost his temper over a dispute about a bill. This is, perhaps, a noble example, and one sure to play some part in fixing him in the affections of the people. The only one who finds no cause for applause in the situation is the other man, whom he also fined, having previously, according to all accounts, pretty badly battered him. The other man wants to carry the matter to the higher courts.

The San Domingo rebellion will now probably lose its supporting force, General Jiminez having been captured and being unable to come to the relief of the revolutionists. His arrest is pronounced in some quarters illegal, as he was taken on board a neutral ship, but it will doubtless answer the purpose.

It is announced that the Atkinson men have decided to organize a national party in opposition to the war as conducted by the administration. The performance will be very much like that of the three tailors of Tooley street, who met and resolved in the name of "We, the people of England."

The impression seems to be growing that Dreyfus will not be acquitted. This is not because the testimony is not in his favor, but that there is an evident leaning on the part of the judges in the opposite direction. They, too, seem to think the "honor of the army" is at stake.

Governor Roosevelt is to take a lively interest in the Ohio political campaign, and will make the opening address for the Republicans at the proper time. If he goes into this sort of politics he will know before he gets through what rough riding amounts to.

Yesterday and today were quite too warm for comfort. It is well, occasionally, to have such days, to show Newporters what kind of weather other cities have nearby all the time.

OUR FUTURE POSITION AMONG THE NATIONS.

The ultimate limits of expansion are definitely fixed and very near. The question is not how far the national bubble can be blown in infinite space before it bursts, but what share each nation will secure in the final distribution of the earth's surface, which will be settled certainly within the next 50 years, perhaps within the next 25. Some of the elements of this settlement can be clearly foreseen. There is room for only three world powers: Great Britain, Russia and the United States. The French colonial empire is an artificial creation that cannot survive the stress of war with a great sea power. So is that of Germany. The most formidable nations of Continental Europe, outside of Russia, must sink to the rank of second or third-class powers. * * * National power must have a solid basis of population and territorial extent; and, cramped in a few hundred thousand square miles each, the Continental states must inevitably be dwarfed by the powers that have had the foresight or the good fortune to spread over the globe.

And how will it be with us? The regions in Asia and Africa which Great Britain already has under mortgage will bring her empire up to not less than 16,000,000 square miles, or one third of all the land of the earth. Russia has within easy reach, in Turkey, Persia, Central Asia and China,—not to speak of Europe—enough territory to raise the total area of her dominions to fully 13,000,000 square miles. What, then, will be our position? Including Hawaii and Porto Rico, we have 3,613,127 square miles. If we annex the whole of the Philippines, we shall have 3,727,455. We may expect that, sooner or later, Cuba and the rest of the West Indies will gravitate to us. That will give the United States in all something over 3,800,000 square miles. As our national temper does not permit unprovoked aggressions upon our neighbors, there is no other important field of expansion open to us, unless Canada and Mexico should voluntarily cast in their lots with ours. If that should happen, we should have a splendidly compact domain of about 7,900,000 square miles, capable of holding its own under all conceivable conditions. But it would still rank only third in territorial extent. The British empire, even after Canada had been transferred to our side of the ledger, would still exceed it by fully 60 per cent; and so would Russia. As a nursery of white men, however, it would be at least equal to either of them.

Another alternative is a reunion of the members of the English-speaking race. That would make us sharers in a dominion of 20,000,000 square miles, commanding all seas, and embracing half the population of the world. Whatever the rest of mankind might do, the people of such a domain would be secure. So far as international relations were concerned, they would have reached the ultimate stability; the planet would contain nothing outside their borders that could endanger them.

In default of these resources—if we neither acquire Canada and Mexico nor unite with our English-speaking kinsmen—our position under the coming definite world-settlement will be simple. We shall hold a respectable, and even secure, but modest, position as the third of the three great powers. Our territory will be between a fourth and a third of that of Russia, and somewhat less than a fourth of that of the British empire. All we can pick up in the way of stray islands here and there will be so utterly insignificant, in the presence of the carving of continents that is going on before our eyes, that to dignify it with the name of Imperialism is trifling with words. If we have acquired a few hundred square miles in the Ladrones, a few thousand in Hawaii, or even a hundred thousand or so in the Philippines, we are far from becoming imperial, as that term will be understood in the world-settlement. We are merely reducing in a microscopic degree the inevitable preponderance against us that will exist when the world is permanently partitioned.—[Samuel E. Moffett, in the Forum.

THE DOSSIER.

The "dossier," about which so much is said in the Dreyfus case, is defined by Mr. Bodley in his recent work on France as the collection of the reports made to officials in regard to the conduct of civil officials, or of the lives and conduct of private citizens. Every official is the subject of close scrutiny and every act of his is subject to be reported to his civil superior, who is thus kept informed of all his antecedents. Thus an official in a certain district who had been in the habit of attending mass carrying a prayer book and had allowed his daughter to sing in the choir was kindly warned by his superior that he was suspected of "clericalism," and was advised by the care to leave his prayer book at home, and that a substitute would be found for his daughter.

Of course such complaints usually come from political or personal enemies of officials but they are all placed in the dossier, ready to be produced if occasion calls. The police tribunals contain the dossiers of actual or suspected criminals, and of the acts of individuals who may sometime be confronted with a record of events, the knowledge of which they had supposed to be confined to themselves, but which may be used against them by personal or political enemies with terrible effect. It is a system of espionage by which the most unimportant acts of an individual may have an unfavorable construction placed upon them and used to his disadvantage. The documents constituting the dossier may be hundreds in number and they are enclosed in an envelope or wrapper which is called the "chemise."

THE QUEEREST PEARL EVER FOUND.

A unique and beautiful gift was presented to Louis XIV of France by a Genoese, Girnstino Sameria. It was a pearl weighing a hundred grains, and had been brought from the Indies by one of this gentleman's relatives. But the most striking part of the matter was not its weight, but its form. It was the exact shape of the torso of a man from the neck to the knees. Sameria had the pearl mounted in so artistic a manner that it was the wonder of the French court. The pearl was utilized for the body of an armed warrior. The head and arms were of hammered gold, backed to the pearl by gold nails. The casque and plumes were also made of gold and set with diamonds. The cloak and sash were of gold enameled in blue with gold fleur de lis scattered over it; the legs from the knees down were of gold; the lance was of gold, with a single diamond for its head, shaped to a point. Three large diamonds form a perfect fleur de lis, and are surmounted by a gold crown, set with diamonds, having a small fleur de lis on top. An angel, also made of hammered gold and carrying a trumpet in one hand, supports the large fleur de lis and crown with the other.

The trophies lying on the pedestal are a drum set with diamonds, a cuirass, buckler, another casque, a turban, a banner with a diamond point, a saber and a gun. Thirty-two large diamonds, rubies and topazes in alternation form the border of the pedestal, which is supported by four gold sphinxes.—[Philadelphia Inquirer.

AMERICANS DO NOT SIT CORRECTLY.

Schools for physical culture are now claiming that we as a nation do not know how to sit correctly. Americans, they say, pay less attention to the hygiene of attitude in sitting than do other nations, and the consequence is that we are degenerating into a nation of dyspeptics. In France and in Germany school children get a regular course of instruction as to the correct attitude to be adopted in sitting, and in those countries stomach troubles are far less prevalent than in countries where no precautions are taken to teach children to sit without relaxing themselves. A relaxed position, it is said, causes the stomach to be crowded out of position. After a time the misplacement becomes chronic. When the stomach is prolapsed the food cannot readily find its way out of it, and, being retained there longer than it should be, undergoes fermentation, and putrefaction processes are set up whereby the system is not only robbed of the nutrient elements necessary for the proper nourishment of the blood and repair of the tissues, but, through the conversion of the food into ptomaines and other poisonous substances, the whole body is contaminated.

On these grounds physicians who teach physical culture assert that it is not the ice water that we drink nor the soda water, nor the amount of smoking that men folk indulge in that causes us to be a nation of dyspeptics, but the bad postures that we adopt when sitting. A correct attitude in sitting requires proper height and width of seat, a desk or table of the proper height when desk work is required, and a proportionate amount of care upon the part of the pupil to sit upon his seat in proper position. The height of the chair you sit in while writing and that of the desk you write at are matters of greatest importance. The seat of the chair should be exactly one-quarter of your height from the floor. Thus, if you are five feet high, the chair should be fifteen inches. The width of the seat should exactly equal its height, and it should slope backward three-quarters of an inch to the foot. The back should be a trifle lower than the seat and sloped slightly, but not too much. Finally, your desk should be two-thirds as high again as the seat of your chair. Thus, if your seat is eighteen inches, the desk should be thirty inches in height. The relation of the person to the seat should be such that, while the hips and shoulders touch the back of the seat, the other portions of the back remain clear. The centre of the back cannot touch the back of the seat without relaxation of the muscles and resulting flatness of the chest, and perhaps of the stomach, provided, of course, the seat back has a backward curvature.—[Kansas City Star.

PARET'S PLAY.

Gives Him a Place in the Finals Over Ware.

Davis Has Not Much Difficulty in Defeating Collins.

The fourth or semi-final round was played in the national lawn tennis tournament at the Casino today. The weather was very hot. The crowd was later than usual in getting into the grounds, and was coming in when the Davis-Collins match was starting in the grand stand court. It came in fast during the first set and finally compared quite favorably with those of the other days.

After a short preliminary practice—it could be hardly called a warming-up in the weather that prevailed the match was started by Referee Mansfield, with Collins in the east court and Davis in the west. Collins began the service and the first game went to Davis, Collins losing three points on netted balls. On Davis's service Collins failed to return the hard serves and Davis won at 15. Collins won his first, the next, on not particularly good tennis. Davis again won on his service, Collins failing to handle it at all successfully. Davis placed well and won the next, with the score 4-1 in his favor. Collins placed better in the next and won, his first on Davis's serve. Collins took the seventh at 15. Davis placed very prettily in the next, and although he made a double fault won the game. Collins played strongly at the end, and finally won the ninth. Davis again made his service tell, Collins being unable to return the ball out of Davis's reach. Davis won the game and the set, 6-4.

Collins lost on his service in the opening game of the second set. In the second Collins's places were well executed, he making four very pretty ones. Davis took the next on generally superior play. He made it 3-1 by taking the next game, and also took the next, at 15, forcing the play throughout and driving accurately and swiftly. He took the next by the same score, passing Collins in beautiful form. Davis also won the next, continuing his excellent form, and won the set, 6-1.

After a rest of 10 minutes the third set was started. Davis serving, and Collins pulled out the game. The second went to Davis, Collins won again on Davis's service, taking the game at love on two places and two outs by Davis. Collins continued his winning streak, taking the fourth, also at love. Davis won the next on his service. In the next Davis steadily outplayed Collins, placing well and winning the game, which made the score 3-all. Collins played well for the next and brought the score to deuce several times by clever passing, and finally won. Davis again evened the score, winning the next game on his hard accurate drives. Collins took the next at love. Davis serving. The next was also a love game, Davis outplaying Collins at every point and winning, making the score 5-all. Davis was now playing great tennis, evidently intending to win out at this point. He was clearly outplaying Collins and the latter was unable to handle his hard drives. He took the odd set at 15, the only point lost by him being on a double fault. Collins pulled up in the next, however, and won out. Both were playing carefully and rallies, which had been few in the match, were more numerous. The vantage game was a long one, going to deuce four times before Davis took two points in succession and won. It was Collins's service again but he could not win out, and Davis on good places won the game which gave him the set, 8-6, and the match, three sets to love.

The other match in the semi-finals, between Ware and Paret, was started on the court near the theatre piazza shortly after the grand stand match was under way. It attracted attention from the start, drawing even from the attendants on the other match, and kept them all until the luncheon hour, and a goodly number after that. It was good tennis throughout. In the first set the play was very even, and the score was tied at 5-all, Paret then won the next two, taking the set at 7-5. In the second Paret clearly outplayed Ware, who netted frequently. The set was a quick one, Paret winning, 6-2. In the third the play was better still, Ware driving more accurately and placing well. Paret continued his good form, being especially successful in his net play. There were many long rallies, in which excellent tennis abounded and many diligent returns were made. The games alternately until they were 4-all, when Paret took two and won the game, set and match. He also secured a place in the finals and a chance for either the runner-up or all-comers' prize.

The Ware-Ward game, which was commenced at noon yesterday, was not completed until the middle of the afternoon, Ware winning three sets to two for Ward. Ware lost the first and third, and Ward the second, fourth and fifth, the score being 3-6, 6-4, 9-11, 6-2, 6-4. Only one match was played in the consolation singles, Budlong beating Freshman, 6-1, 6-0.

One of the consolation matches was played today, the second match in the semi-final round, between Budlong and Little, the latter winning in two straight sets, 6-3, 10-8, the second being close and interesting. The final match will be between Fischer and Little.

The summary of the morning play is as follows:

Singles—Semi-Final Round.

Davis beat Collins, 6-4, 6-1, 8-6.
Paret beat Ware, 7-5, 6-2, 6-4.

Consolations, Semi-Finals.

Little beat Budlong, 6-3, 10-8.

The result of the Paret-Ware match was the greatest and really the only surprise of the tournament. Paret astonished even his friends by his accurate work, and his net play was among the best seen in the tournament. The tennis throughout the match was of first-class order. Ware playing an excellent game, his placing being specially good. Paret's surprising game today has given additional interest to the final match, between him and Davis, to be played Monday.

He is a heavy man and the fall completely knocked him out, so that when he was hauled to the dock, as he was very quickly, he was unconscious. The boat hands tried to resuscitate him and a doctor who was going to New York assisted in the work. The man was finally sent to the hospital.

WAS CONTRADICTORY.

latter's threats to proclaim himself a tool of the general staff, after which the general alluded to the Henry forgery and M. Cavaignac's interrogations of Henry.

"You know the result," said he, apparently much moved. "I will not tell you what I suffered at that moment. As soon as everything was ended, I tendered my resignation but was asked to withdraw it. I was told every one could make a mistake. But I replied that while every one was liable to err, every one had not the misfortune, as I had, to assert to a jury that a document was genuine when in reality it was forged, that every one ought to stand by one's word and that when a man happened to experience such a misfortune there was nothing left for him but to go away, and from that moment I have held aloof." (Sensation).

Replying to the court, General De Boisdeffre admitted that the leakage at military headquarters continued. After the condemnation of Dreyfus, he added, it ceased for a year, but, in 1895, a paper was discovered proving the communication to foreigners of a document relating to the distribution of the artillery and showing that a foreign government was perfectly acquainted with the changes made.

Answering a question put by a member of a court-martial relative to the conflicting testimony of General Mercier and M. Casimir-Perier, witness replied that he certainly had an interview with General Mercier early in January, during the course of which Mercier remarked, in regard to the representations of a foreign ambassador to the president of the republic: "It is not going to happen this time either. You can sleep in peace. The incident has been settled."

De Boisdeffre declared he was no less certain of what had been said in regard to the confessions to Captain Lebrun-Renault. The general was also perfectly certain that the incident at the Elysee did not occur January 5, 1895. It was, he said, the sixth or seventh. "What is certain," added General De Boisdeffre, "is that when it occurred I remained, personally, at the ministry of war."

M. Demange referred to General Roget's deposition to the effect that Dreyfus was certainly intelligent, but that he would not have wished to see him on the headquarters staff, and asked the witness's opinion on the subject. The general answered: "I can only express the same opinion as General Roget."

M. Demange—"Was not Esterhazy, with your knowledge, assisted at the court of inquiry by Major Du Paty De Clam, who gave him advice?"

De Boisdeffre—"I am absolutely not aware of it."

Colonel Jouaust, president of the court-martial, put the usual questions to the prisoner, who replied: "I have nothing to say to General De Boisdeffre."

After a brief suspension of the sitting of the court General Gonse, who was under chief of the general staff, was called to the witness stand. He explained the motives which had influenced his actions during the past few years and said he believed he was "animated by the loftiest aims; namely, the protection of the army against the criminal attacks made on it from all sides." In this connection he dwelt upon the danger to France of the "system of espionage so cleverly organized against her by foreigners," and said that, in spite of Esterhazy's statement, it was impossible for him to have written the bordereau, and still more impossible for him to have secured the information contained therein. He added that no traces of indiscretion were discovered during all the proceedings against Esterhazy.

Continuing, the witness deplored the fact that the court-martial of 1894 was held behind closed doors, adding: "I regard it as a misfortune, as a great misfortune."

General Gonse then denied that Esterhazy had received money from the intelligence department, and describing the "strange behavior" of Dreyfus and his "frequent acts of indiscretion," the witness begged the court to summon the secretary of the ministry of war who surprised the prisoner prying in the offices at a time when there was no business going on there.

The general defended Guenee and referred to another spy as an "honorable man," whose name he could not give, as having furnished military headquarters with valuable information.

Colonel Jouaust—"He is in receipt of regular monthly pay?"

General Gonse—"He was paid when he brought information."

Major Carriere—"We have here two different versions."

General Gonse—"I mean to say that as he watched others he was paid his expenses, as we did not want him to be out of pocket."

The witness asserted that while the name of Dreyfus was often mentioned in the documents in the possession of the intelligence department his innocence was nowhere hinted at.

The general then proceeded to defend Paty De Clam from the insinuations of Colonel Picquart and corroborated General Mercier's evidence in regard to the alleged confessions made to Captain Lebrun-Renault. Witness learned, however, that Captain LeBrun-Renault, "intimidated by the censure of M. Casimir-Perier," did not dare to repeat these confessions and gave only an incomplete account of the occurrences at the time of the prisoner's degradation. There was no truth, the witness said, in Colonel Picquart's statements in regard to his (General Gonse's) excitement January 5. The general said he only learned of the ambassador's actions January 6. The general denied other statements made by Picquart and referred to the alleged number of arrests ordered by Picquart on "unfounded charges of espionage."

At this juncture considerable comment was aroused by the fact that, contrary to the provisions of the law requiring the testimony to be verbal and without notes, General Gonse, adjusting his eyeglasses, proceeded to consult the large note book and frequently refreshed his memory.

Dealing with the Henry forgery, General Gonse declared: "I can say it was already known. General Roget spoke to me about it at least eight days before Henry confessed." (Sensation).

One of the judges asked if the witness knew that a document relating to the conveying of troops was for 24 hours in the hands of the prisoner and if he knew that imaginary sketches executed by the prisoner had been delivered abroad.

General Gonse—"I could not give a positive answer to that question.

"Are there proofs that the documents mentioned in the bordereau were delivered abroad?"

"There were no direct proofs, but their dispatch was certainly announced."

Proceeding, he disputed Magistrate Bertulus's account of the interview with Henry, but admitted that when he (General Gonse) handed Henry his forgery, the latter insisted it must be shown to Picquart. (Sensation)

Replying to M. Demange, witness admitted he had ordered Colonel Picquart not to concern himself with the handwriting of the bordereau when he commenced his investigations of Esterhazy.

"Then," asked M. Demange sharply, "when you saw his handwritings were identical with the writings of the bordereau, did that make no impression upon you?"

"Evidently," replied the witness. "The two handwritings had a great resemblance."

M. Demange—"The 'honorable' person already referred to was not in receipt of pay, you said just now."

Gonse—"The person was not an agent. He indeed wished to procure us information in and out of Europe, but he concerned himself with agents and his expenses were paid."

M. Demange—"Do you regard this poisun as a spy?"

General Gonse—"He only supplied information."

M. Demange—"Did you not say that this person had applied for a Cross of the Legion of Honor and that if he was not decorated it was because some one had intervened to prevent it."

Gonse—"I never heard of it."

Demange—"Very good."

When Dreyfus was asked the regular question he said: "I will reply direct to the secretary of the minister of war, who said he saw me in the offices after service hours. As regards General Gonse, I am surprised that the general officer repeats dinner-table gossip. There is known to be insurmountable difficulty in introducing any one into the ministry of war and it is absolutely impossible for an officer to bring any one into the ministry.

To this the general replied: "No doubt it is difficult."

Colonel Jouaust—No doubt it is difficult, but it is not impossible. The ministry can be entered easily enough at certain hours. Dreyfus was in a position to know that." (Sensation)

The prisoner—"I will reply to Secretary Ferrel, who has told a lie. What I have to say to General Gonse is that every time a friend came to see me at the ministry, even when a French officer, I was obliged to descend to the floor below, and even members of the chambers of deputies who called on me could not enter the ministry. It was consequently absolutely impossible under ordinary circumstances for a subaltern to bring any one into the ministry." General Gonse declared that permits could easily be obtained.

At this point Colonel Picquart reentered the witness box in order to reply to allegations as to the way he performed his duties. He denied a number of General Gonse's assertions regarding the arrests which the witness ordered. Picquart also described the extraordinary methods of investigation employed in the intelligence department by his predecessors.

Counsel for the defense, after emphasizing the fact that even in the opinion of General De Boisdeffre there was a connection between the Esterhazy and Dreyfus affairs, asked the president of the court to request Colonel Picquart to give information in regard to the 100,000 francs said to have been awarded for the surveillance of Esterhazy.

Picquart explained how the expenditures was regulated in the intelligence department. "In any case," he said "no extraordinary expenditure was made in connection with the Esterhazy inquiry. There could not be an inquiry costing less.

"In a note sent to the minister of justice in 1896 it was set forth that I employed as official agents the private detectives of the inquiry bureau. I only employed a single official agent. What led to the belief that I employed agencies was the fact that this agent styled himself a 'business agent' on one of his cards, included in the dossier of the Esterhazy affair."

Immediately after Picquart had finished speaking General Billot jumped up and asked leave to speak.

"Picquart," the general called sharply to the officer who had just left the stand. "Will you come back?" (Sensation.)

"Certainly," replied Picquart.

After General Billot had spoken in rebuttal of Picquart's statement the court, at 11:45 a. m., adjourned for the day.

WILBUR OPERA COMPANY AGAIN.

Manager Bull of the Opera House has secured the Wilbur Opera Company for nine nights, beginning Tuesday next. The organization is well known here, having played a very successful engagement at the Opera House last spring. During the greater part of the summer it has been playing to excellent business in Providence. The company includes Anna Loughlin, Ethel Robinson, Hattie Richardson, Margaret Batton, J. E. Conley, Harry Lane, C. E. Huntington, Gus Vaughan and Al Lamar, with a chorus of 25 and an orchestra under the direction of Arthur C. Pell. The manager is Maud Daniel. Between the acts of the operas vaudeville will be introduced by Anna Loughlin, Master Gabriel, H. G. DeBanks and the Lamar Brothers, with illustrated songs by a male and female quartet.

"THE FIRST MOVABLE CHURCH."

"The First Movable Church" is the title of a pamphlet recently published by Rev. Charles E. Preston of Jamestown. It is a complete story of the movement which resulted in the building of the Movable Chapel of the Transfiguration, "the only complete church on wheels in the world," with a full description of the chapel, the dedicatory exercises and many other matters connected with St. Matthew's Church, Jamestown, and the chapel. There are many pictures in the book, including portraits of Bishops Clark and McVickar, the late Rev. G. J. Magill, Rev. Mr. Preston and others, and many scenes of the transportation of the chapel to its present location. It is a decidedly interesting book.

ENGLAND MUST WIN.

Weak Front in Africa Would Mean Break-Up of the Empire.

[Copyright, 1899, by the Associated Press.]

LONDON, Aug. 19.—The Earl of Denbigh, speaking of a Primrose meeting during the week, voiced the general feeling of the government's supporters by saying: "If the breakup of the British empire is wanted, all we have to do is to show a weak front in South Africa. Great Britain has to win the next trick there, either by diplomacy or other means."

Mr. William T. Stead, in the Review of Reviews, makes a startling insinuation against Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, the secretary of state for the colonies. He says that if the Liberal leaders, Sir William Vernon Harcourt and Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, two years ago had not "made themselves parties to a most scandalous fraud in the way of white washing ever perpetrated upon the public, Mr. Chamberlain would not be in the colonial office today."

Mr. Stead refers, apparently, to the Jameson raid in the Transvaal, and insinuates Mr. Chamberlain is entirely responsible for the present crisis, adding: "What is now demanded, almost avowed, is the destruction of the domination of the Boer oligarchy." Continuing, Mr. Stead berates Sir Alfred Milner, the British high commissioner in South Africa, and says that if he were away from the Transvaal there would be no threatenings of war in South Africa.

A matter of another kind has raised a storm of indignation in London. At the earl's court exhibition is a Kaffir kraal, somewhat similar to the Dahomey camp at the Chicago World's fair. In spite of the fact that the kraal is managed by an influential company, called the Savage South African Limited, it is alleged that the vilest orgies take place there. But the greatest storm was raised by the innocent and worse attentions showered by Englishmen upon these half-naked Kaffirs, instigated by curiosity, kindness or other motives. Fashionable women go into the black men's huts and give them presents. The Kaffirs put the worst possible interpretation upon this feminine adoration. The extent of this black worship has been brought out prominently by the marriage of an alleged prince, a former inmate of the kraal, to an English girl who is well connected. The papers denounce the show and publish long editorials upon the evil effect it will have on the status of white women living in Africa. Among the shareholders of the concern are Earl Grey, Mr. John Hays Hammond, Lord French, Major Barton and several intimate friends of Mr. Cecil Rhodes. One of the most influential directors is reported to have resigned on account of the scandal. It is probable the kraal will either be closed or better regulated. This little band of savages has brought home to the English people, for the first time, the seriousness of mixed marriages.

The dean and chapter of St. Paul's have concluded not to have the cathedral lighted by electricity at present. The expenses of the installation of the electric plant have been offered by Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan. But as the chapter had to pay for Mr. Holley's free gratis communion plate, the authorities of St. Paul's fight shy of the electric light proposition. The redecoration of the cathedral, which is now progressing, also makes electric lighting an artistic impossibility.

Mr. William Waldorf Astor intends to put his son into the Household cavalry. He was educated at Eton and Oxford.

A representative of the Associated Press learns that, following the American lead, a whiskey trust is to be formed in Ireland. It is also announced that the wall paper manufacturers of the United Kingdom are forming a corner to put up prices. Other industrials are showing a desire to consolidate.

Mr. Victor Christian Cavendish, member of Parliament for West Derbyshire and heir of the Duke of Devonshire, speaking during the week at the Agricultural Show at Bakewell, Derbyshire, said: "I recently visited the United States and Canada. There is nothing to be afraid of there so far as stock breeding is concerned. A gentleman connected with the American government told me there was no doubt that the next few years would see a large importation from England to the United States of stock for breeding."

Congressman Loud of California, chairman of the House committee on postoffices and post roads, has been here during the past week examining the railroad mails system. Every facility has been afforded him by the Duke of Norfolk, the postmaster general. But Mr. Loud said to a reporter of the Associated Press: "The result so far has been somewhat disappointing. Statistics as to weight, etc., are not kept here. A comparison of the cost is thus impossible. I am going with Mr. Bradley of the New York postoffice to examine the systems of Berlin and Paris."

SELLING OLD SPANISH CANNON.

At the end of the war with Spain a Wall Street company purchased from the Spanish government 500 old brass cannon. They were antiquated guns taken from Havana, Morro Castle, and Cabanas, and were not used during the war. The lot included guns weighing from 500 to 5,000 pounds and dating from 1710 to 1815. They were brought from Havana to the Erie Basin, Brooklyn, in January. Since that time more than two thirds of them have been sold. Mr. Ja[illegible], one of the firm, said recently that out of the 1,000,000 pounds bought, only about 300,000 pounds remain on hand.

"They have gone to private persons, parks, schools and museums," said the owner. "Men with country estates have bought them for their artistic value, they said, as well as for relics. W. E. Connor, Luther Kountz and G. P. Morosini, for instance, have each several mounted on the grounds about their country homes. We sold a number to the Fairmount Park Art Association at Philadelphia. The Pratt Institute of Brooklyn took some; and we have shipped a number to foreign countries, purchased for museums by agents in this country, and sent away quietly. We do not know where they went; we only know that they were bought and paid for. We loaded them on lighters, but don't know to what ships they were taken. I think some went to Germany, however.

"We bought the lot at auction, and the sale was at first protested by the United States government. It was claimed that the cannon, being taken as prizes of war, could not be sold by the Spanish government. But the commission sent down to Cuba by the President looked into the case, and decided that, under a certain provision of the protocol, which was in force then, they could be retained as movable property, being obsolete for the purposes of war. The President was finally appealed to, and he ordered another sale, sustaining the decision of the commission."

The cannon are in good condition. Near the breech, on almost every one, is carved the royal arms of Spain, and the dates and names of the reigning kings are cut in them. The ornamentation on some of them consists of bands of raised carvings, circling the barrel at the muzzle, the breech, and at the centre. Between these bands various designs are cut: scrolls, ribbon-like banners, and flowers. On some, instead of being raised, the designs are cut down into the brass.—[New York Post.

THE CANTATA OF JEPHTHA.

The cantata of Jephtha, which was given at Masonic hall Thursday evening for the benefit of the Mount Olivet Baptist Church, was repeated last evening at the gymnasium at Coasters' Harbor island for the entertainment of the naval apprentices. The singers and a large number of guests were taken over in special boats from Kinsley's wharf at 7:15. Several small launches, besides the Annie, being required to transfer all. Besides the visitors from the city, the officers of the Torpedo Station and War College with their families were invited, and the big drill hall in the gymnasium was in consequence well filled.

Anew, commodious stage had been erected by the carpenter at the west end of the building. This was tastefully draped with flags of all nations, and was lighted by a neat arrangement of electric lights which made the sombre drill hall look brilliant. The cast was the same as at the Newport performance, Mr. Thomas Benjamin taking the part of Jephtha, with Miss Celeste Mitchell as Iphigenia and Messrs. R. R. Chase, C. Buchanan, A. Hardy, F. Turner, A. Johnson, Alonzo Van Horne and J. G. Gray, and Misses Dora Henderson, Margaret Johnson, Alice Souzer, Mamie Toney, Bessie Gunner and Mrs. Spotswood in the other leading parts. The Training Station orchestra furnished music.

The performance was a very creditable one and was appreciated by the apprentice boys, for whose special benefit it was given. It is proposed by the department to have entertainments of some kind for the boys once a week, and this was the opening one. Chaplain Jones had charge of the affair.

The attendance of citizens and others from outside the Station helps these entertainments, as the boys are glad to see visitors at the Station.

SOCIAL FUNCTIONS.

Among those giving dinners last night were Mrs. C. H. Baldwin, Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, Mrs. C. W. Dolan, Colonel Morrell, Mrs. E. J. Berwind, Mrs. Henry Clews, Mrs. J. H. Beekman, Mrs. J. J. Mason and Mrs. H. M. Brooks. Luncheons were given earlier in the day by Mrs. Paul A. Andrews, Mrs. Joseph F. Stone and Mrs. Ross R. Winans. A small dance followed Mrs. Clews's dinner, music being furnished by Howard's orchestra.

Mr. C. W. Dolan and Mr. Jesse Brown gave luncheons at the Golf Club yesterday, and Mrs. George B. de Forest entertained a large party at Gooseberry island last night.

STREET RAILWAY HEARING.

The hearing last evening before the committee on streets and highways, on the petition of the Newport Street Railway Company for permission to extend its track from Broadway through Vernon avenue to its lot on that street, attracted very little attention from the general public, judging by the attendance. Besides the committee, there were present C. P. Magner, A. C. Landers and Colonel W. P. Sheffield, representing the company; Councilman Wilbur, Mr. J. C. Burke and two reporters. The railroad had furnished a plat of the proposed location, which showed two curves turning from Broadway into Vernon avenue, about 350 feet of track on Vernon avenue to the road on the north side of the railway company's lot, and along this to the west side of the lot, a distance of perhaps 180 feet. The plat showed that three building lots on Vernon avenue had been sold.

When remarks were called for Mr. Sheffield said the plat which the members of the committee had seen explained the proposed spur track better than he could. It was desired to build this to afford access to the company's property for the storage of cars, etc.

Chairman Shepley asked if this was a starter for a new route to the beach, with the intention of securing a right of way for that purpose.

Mr. Magner of the company said he did not think any such purpose was intended. As he understood it, the track was simply to give access to the company's property, and there was no proposition to extend beyond it.

Mr. Sheffield said the company could not extend its tracks without the permission of the City Council. The regular notice, prescribed by the charter, had been given the abutters and those interested in the property affected.

No one else appearing to speak, the hearing was adjourned.

PEARLS OF PANAMA.

Average Value of Gems Secured About $150,000 a Year.

The magnificent pearls which ornament the crown of Spain and which are so much admired by tourists who visit the cathedrals at Seville and Toledo were found in oyster shells in the Bay of Panama, and the large strings and clusters which the Spaniards took from the Indians both on the north and west coasts of South America came from the same source. Pearl fishing is still carried on to a considerable extent at Panama. In the spring of 1899 a boy fifteen years old found an oyster that concealed a jewel now offered for sale in Paris for $10,000. He received $4,000 for it from a negro speculator named Justiano. The latter brought it to Panama and sold it to Felix Erhman, the banker, for a considerable advance on that price. At the Erhman banking house the other day I saw an assortment of pearls valued all the way from $50 to $1,000, which are Panama prices, and considerably lower than those that would be asked for the same jewels in London, Paris or New York. Few pearls are sent to New York because of the duty imposed upon them by our government. Those that go are smuggled.

The annual harvest of pearls here will average a value of about $150,000. There are several firms engaged in the business—Prospero Penal, Pisa y Pisa, Arosemena Hermanos, Maduro Hermanos and others. The Ehrmans do no fishing, but buy pearls of speculators.

Pearl oysters are found in all parts of Panama bay. Two years ago an ordinary fisherman found one near Taboga island, not more than half a mile from the regular steamship anchorage, that contained a pearl worth $2,400, but the largest beds are about thirty miles from the city. The oysters are much larger than those found in northern waters, and the shells are even larger still. The oysters are rank and coppery, but are healthful and are eaten by the natives. The smaller ones are often brought to the Panama market.

The pearl islands, as they are called, compose an archipelago on the west side of Panama bay, about thirty miles from the steamship landing. There are sixteen islands and several large rocks, with between thirty and forty little villages of negroes and mixed Indians, a population of perhaps 5,000 all told, engaged in pearl diving. The islands are low and heavily timbered and the soil is fertile. The cocoanut groves and long stretches of white beach that glisten like silver in the sun make a pretty picture. Most of the islands belong to the merchants I have named, who cultivate the soil as well as manage the fisheries. The largest, called Rey, which has about one-half the population, is fifteen miles long and seven broad. San Miguel—St. Michael—the chief town and headquarters of the fisheries, is nothing more than a cluster of palm-thatched huts. Several stores are built of wood and corrugated iron, and a church of stone is larger and more costly than all the rest of the buildings of the town combined.

The population, mostly colored, are descended from the slaves that were originally employed by the Spaniards in pearl diving. Since freedom came in 1821 the descendants of the old villagers have carried on the business under different regulations. The divers, like the gold miners, who were also slaves, were formerly kept in pens like the diamond diggers of Brazil and South Africa. Perhaps that was the reason why convicts and slaves only were used for this work. It must have been difficult to induce independent citizens, however humble, to submit to such treatment; but even then, with all the precautions that were exercised, the finest pearls were smuggled out from the islands, just as the finest diamonds have been smuggled out from the corrals in Brazil and South Africa. I saw in Paris a few years ago the greatest gem of modern times. It is without a history. Expensive diamonds have pedigrees like horses and pictures, and experts can trace them back from owner to owner until they were first known; but this diamond was never seen or heard of until it was offered for sale at the Paris exposition in 1889, and was a surprise to all of the dealers in Europe. There are many conjectures as to its origin, but it was undoubtedly stolen by some miner and smuggled out of a corral in South Africa.

Some years ago, when the royal mail steamer Guadiana was wrecked on the coast of Brazil, we had among the passengers a Belgian diamond smuggler, who went into the mining districts in the interior every year and purchased gems from saloon keepers and others who could communicate with miners inside of the pen. He had a belt around his waist containing $250,000 worth of uncut stones of various sizes, and was in constant terror for fear they would be discovered and confiscated, because there is a heavy export duty imposed on diamonds by the Brazilian government. He bought his stones very low, of course, because neither the miners nor the saloon keepers had any correct idea of their value, and they had few opportunities for selling them. They were therefore glad to get the best price that was offered.

There are two methods of operating at the pearl island in Panama bay. The owners of the oyster beds give permits to natives to fish in them upon the payment of a certain rental and a heavy percentage of the pearls recovered, and they in turn pay a heavy tax to the government. The divers can bring up all the oysters they please. The shells are valuable for mother-of-pearl, so that their time is not wasted even if they contain no gems.

The divers plunge into ten or twelve fathoms of water, for the best pearls are found in the deepest beds, and bring up as many shells as they can in their arms, which their wives or assistants open in the boat. Of course, only a few contain pearls, which are deformities—excrescences formed by the secretions of the oyster clinging to and accumulating upon foreign particles which have intruded into its cloister. Sometimes a tiny bit of sand lodges in the shell, and the saliva and other secretions bathe it day after day, just as they bathe the inside of the shell, and form the pearly coating it always contains. Pearls are therefore accidents, and not one oyster in a hundred contains them. The divers work for days, sometimes for weeks, without finding a single pearl, and the only reward of their labor is the shells, which are worth from 5 to 8 cents each in the New York market and from 3 to 5 cents in Panama.

Most of the pearls are small, according to the growth, and if they could be left in the water would grow larger. Some are minute, like bird shot, which are worth from $1 to $10 each. Occasionally they find one as big as a small pea, which will sell for $25 or $50. The value varies with the size and perfection. I saw a beautiful great black pear-shaped pearl at Mr. Erhmann's that would have been worth thousands of dollars but for an imperfection, which reduced its value to hundreds. It can be set in a brooch with the fair side out. Like we wear our best manners in company, and the world at large may admire it, but every expert will at once recognize why it was set that way.

All the Panama merchants I have named employ diving bells and send men down to the bottom of the bay to pick out the best-looking shells, which are put in baskets and hauled up to the surface of the water and dumped into boats. These men are paid by the month and work in gangs under a foreman, receiving stated wages and rations. They have no share in the jewels they find, and it is difficult for them to steal, unless the whole party, foreman and all, enter into the conspiracy.—[Correspondence of the Chicago Record.

A WOMAN HEAD FOR A MANUAL TRAINING SCHOOL.

The Philadelphia Times announces that the Conshohocken school board has selected a woman—Miss Ida Davis—as head instructor of the wood and metal-working department of the local manual training school. In wood-working Miss Davis has taken a deep interest for many years, and around her father's house has been quite handy with the ordinary carpenter's tools. Not only is Miss Davis proficient with the ordinary tools used in wood-working establishments but she is an expert in handling the finer tools, especially in hand-engraving, scroll-work, etc. Among her possessions is a hand-made chair, carved with her own hands, and for which she declined an offer of $100. Miss Davis resides with her parents, and she is an only daughter. Her father is an attorney-at-law, practicing in the Philadelphia and Montgomery county courts. Concerning her work she says:

"Some years ago I became interested in manual training as taught in the public schools, and when I attended the first exhibition of our local manual-training school, I felt that I could teach what was then and is still taught to the boys. But in order to become as proficient as possible, I entered the Drexel Institute in Philadelphia, and after taking the full course there—myself and another lady being the only women entered for the course—I finished very creditably, and received encouraging words from those in charge of the institution. I intend, upon taking charge of the Conshohocken Manual Training School August 28 next to give a thorough course of training in all the branches allotted to the boys, not only in theory but in practice. Wood-turning, joinery, the manipulation of lathes, the care of tools, the handling of the same—everything in connection with manual training will be carefully considered and taught under my direction. I intend also to watch over the progress of the institution day by day, and propose any reforms, etc., the need of which may become evident. Among other things, I shall use my utmost endeavors to prove that a woman can teach a class of boys in manual training just as well as she can a class of scholars in the primary department."

CLARA BARTON BROKEN DOWN.

It is feared that the work of Clara Barton, as president of the Red Cross, is almost at an end. This has been known among her friends and relatives at Worcester, where she was born and reared, for some time, although they have until now preserved the utmost secrecy relative to the letters they had received from her while she was in Cuba.

Letters received recently from Miss Barton by her nephew, John H. Stafford, of Oxford, a small village about six miles from Worcester, stated that she had returned from Cuba so utterly broken down in health as to be absolutely unfitted for any more active work at present. She had been not only engaged in arduous labor during her stay in Cuba but had been planning in an elaborate way for educational work among the children of that island, and had cherished ambitious hopes in that direction. She intimates that her disappointment in that direction is far greater than any physical suffering that might come to her.

Her sister, Mrs. J. H. Stafford, who has been visiting her in New York since her return, writes that Miss Barton has grown old in appearance to an alarming degree since she last met her, a little over a year ago. Miss Barton herself acknowledges that her work in Cuba during the hot season has been more trying and difficult than any that she has ever before engaged in.

If the truth were known she is completely broken down, and will go to her home in Washington under the most careful treatment. Later, unless her physician interferes, she will probably return to her old home to recuperate.

There are few people in Worcester or Worcester county to whom Miss Barton's name does not bring a thrill of love and sympathy, and her return there would be gladly welcomed by those who are so proud to claim her as a daughter. The soldiers call her the "Angel of the Battlefield." The old people of Worcester county who knew her in youth call her "that blessed child," and hope in all sincerity that the closing days of her life will be passed there.

Recent letters received from Miss Barton by a friend reveal as nothing else can her self-sacrifice, Christian character and womanly nobility. She says, in answer to compliments: "I have no mission; I never had a mission. But I have always had more work than I could do lying around my feet, and I try to get out of the way, so as to go on and do the next thing. The only misfortune of my life has been that my will has always been stronger than my health."—[Boston Transcript.

BATTLESHIP ALABAMA'S TRIAL.

The date for the preliminary trial of battleship Alabama has been scheduled for August 27. In order to allow for unforeseen contingencies two days grace have been added to this date, so that August 29 will be the limit of time. As is customary in such trials by the Cramps, the powerful battleship will proceed to the second lighthship outside the Delaware capes, where the test will come off. A picked crew of 350 men will man the Alabama. Edwin S. Cramp, as the superintending engineer of the firm, will have personal supervision of the trial. Captain Redford Sargent will be in command, and Pilot Harry Long the guide. Harry Mull, the expert engineer, will look after the engine and boiler rooms, where the real work of the preliminary and official trials is done. The stipulated speed of 17 knots, and even better, is confidently expected to be attained. During September the official trial of the Alabama will take place in New England waters.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19, Wall Street—The stock market opened strong, with Atchison preferred at 66, Burlington 136½, Continental Tobacco 48, Leather 10¼, Louisville 81½, Manhattan 117, Missouri Pacific 49¾, New York Central 148¾, Brooklyn Transit 110¼, Northern Pacific 54½, People's Gas 121¼, Rock Island 119¾, Sugar 150¾, St. Paul 132¾, Southern preferred 51⅛, Tennessee Coal & Iron 92½, and Union Pacific 45⅝.

10—Small gains were the rule at the opening of the stock market, strength being manifested in much the same stocks as yesterday. Southern Pacific & Louisville were up about ¾ and Sugar almost as much. Tennessee Coal jumped two points. Consolidated Gas was up a point. Brooklyn Transit sagged a fraction. Dealings were on quite a large scale.

11—Price movements were very irregular during the first hour, with strength and weakness confined to groups. High prices ruled for the western shares, St. Paul gaining 1½. Louisville and Norfolk & Western worked steadily upward, but other southern shares were quiet. Southern Pacific ran off on realizations, but Central Pacific reached record figures on this movement. Industrials and the local properties lost ground, especially Sugar and Brooklyn Transit.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—The weekly bank statement is as follows: Surplus reserve, increased, $986,075; loans, increased, $1,018,600; specie, increased, $136,600; legal tenders, decreased, $615,000; deposits, increased, $1,282,500; circulation, increased, $74,100. The banks now hold $15,082,350 in excess of legal requirements.

TRIAL RACES HERE

First in the Series to be Sailed Probably September 1.

It is now practically settled that the trial races will be sailed off Newport between the Columbia and the Defender, and that the two boats are going to Bristol to prepare for those races, which will be of more than ordinary interest, as the yachts will be officially measured and raced on time allowance.

Mr. Woodbury Kane, who is closely identified with Mr. C. Oliver Iselin, and who has been on the Columbia since her launching and in all her races, was seen last night and is authority for the above statement. He could not say how many races would be sailed, that matter resting entirely with the race committee, but he thought that the first one would be Friday, September 1.

He said there are several reasons why Newport has been selected for these trial races, one and the chief being that it would do away with the long tow to and from Sandy Hook, which would be necessary if the yachts were in New York, occupying much time. Another reason is that Mr. Iselin and the owners wish to be within easy access to the Herreshoff works should there be any accidents.

There is plenty of sea room off Newport, and the big sloops will not be hampered by excursion boats, so that the boats can be tested fairly and squarely, and as they are always on the racing ground no towing out and in is necessary.

One yachtsman, when spoken to on the subject, said he thought if the beginning of the change of all big races from off Sandy Hook to Newport.

The Columbia remained at her moorings in Brenton's cove all day yesterday, Mr. and Mrs. Iselin spending the morning at Oonds. At 4 o'clock in the afternoon they boarded the Columbia, awnings were furled and the big mainsail hoisted. The gaff topsail was set and she was soon standing up the bay under full sail, even to her jiblapsail, running before the light southerly wind. After passing Gould island she came about on the wind and came back to her moorings, being out less than two hours. Mr. Duncan returned from Bristol last night, where he went with the Defender. The Columbia will leave for that place today.

WA WA WINS AGAIN.

Light winds again yesterday caused a postponement in a cup race for the thirties, the Newport Yacht Racing Association having a trophy up, but a sweepstakes was sailed in its stead, and the Wa Wa, Thursday's winner, again finished first. The triangular course was sailed over once, the first leg being to Bishop rock. It was a run out, the Vaquero III getting the start and holding it to the mark, where there was a general mix-up, the Raccoon forcing an overlap over the Vaquero III and Carolina, and being protested after the race. The Carolina, Raccoon and Veda were sailed by professionals. The summary:

EASTERN WASHERWOMEN.

The hardest worked washerwomen in the world are the Coreans. They have to wash about a dozen dresses for their husbands, and, inasmuch as every man wears pantaloons or drawers so baggy that they come up to his neck like those of a clown, they have plenty to do. The washing is usually done in cold water, and often in running streams. The clothes are pounded with paddles until they shine like a shirt front fresh from a Chinese laundry.

The Japanese rip their garments apart for every washing, and they iron their clothes by spreading them on a flat board and leaning this up against the house to dry. The sun takes the wrinkles out of the clothes, and some of them have quite a luster. The Japanese woman does her washing out of doors. Her washtub is not more than six inches high, and is about as big around as the average dishpan. She sometimes uses Japanese soap, which is full of grease, and works away with her bare feet. The Chinese girls do their washing in much the same way.

The washing in Egypt is usually done by the men. The Egyptian washerman stands on the banks of the Nile and slaps the wet clothes, with a noise like the shot of a pistol, on the smooth stones at the edge of the running water, and such fellah women as wash pound the dirt out of their clothes in the same way.

French women pound the dirt with paddles, often slapping the clothes upon stones as the Egyptians do.—Washington Star.

Newport, 8; Taunton, 0.

After an absence of over a week the Newports returned to Freebody Park yesterday and justified the record they had made on their last down-East trip, by easily walking away from the Tauntons. The batting was strong, and though some of it was wasted so far as runs are concerned enough of the hard hitting counted to give the Newports the game with a big margin to spare. On the other hand, "Buster" Burrill was the only Taunton man who appeared to know much about Gannon's curves, and he was "on to them" to the extent of a double and two singles out of four times at bat. He was the only visitor to see third.

Shay, late of Brockton, covered third for Newport, O'Brien going to short. The new man made a good impression. He is, as every one knows, a good fielder, and this season has been batting hard. O'Brien as usual was not at all disturbed by being shifted and gathered in at least one ball that seemed good for a hit. Burrill covered first in good style for the visitors. Kellogg gathered in a number of difficult ones all over the field, including a foul fly back of first, and George Grant covered the centre pasture in his old-fashioned sprightly manner. Still the visitors were not in the game at any period. The home players seemed to solve McCafferty's benders, and they were sent all around, quite a number going to right. Flemming played with a very poor knee; but he played just the same, and by fast work beat out one of his well known bunts, despite good fielding. The umpiring was very good, and the attendance fair. The air was hot and close. The score:

Bases on balls—O'Brien; Kellogg. Two-base hits—Gannon; Burrill. Three-base hit—Gannon. Sacrifice hit—Murphy. Double play—Gannon-O'Brien-Shires. Hit by pitched ball—Murphy. Struck out—Kellogg, Williams 2, McCafferty. Passed balls—Curtis 2. Left on bases—Newport, 11; Taunton, 7. Time—1 hour, 31 minutes. Umpire—Moore.

Portland, 6; Manchester, 4.

Portland, Me., Aug. 18.—Today's game was won by the home team in the first inning, Curran being batted freely. The Manchesters also started in savagely on Miller, but both pitchers settled down to fine work in the second inning and each was thereafter supported in excellent shape. Score:

Innings	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
Manchester	3	0	0	0	0	1	0	0	0	—4

Hits—Portland, 6; Manchester, 11. Errors—Portland, 2; Manchester, 1. Batteries—Miller and Purinton, Curran and Lake.

Notes.

Tommy Brady, once with Newport, sat on Taunton's bench. He has fleshed out considerably.

Portland will be here Monday and Tuesday next, and Foley is due to pitch Monday. The excellent games the home team has been playing of late should ensure a good attendance, as John Smith's team will put up its usual stiff game and dispute every inch of the way.

Crisham is playing first for Baltimore. Foley, the Newport pitcher, has been sold to the Indianapolis club but will remain with the Newports until the close of the season, joining Indianapolis September 4.

Flemming will lay off today, and with two days' rest hopes to be in good condition Monday.

The Newports bought a half-dozen 25-cent bats at Manchester and have been using them since—and using them more effectively than their old and more expensive bats, which they have discarded.

Shay, who played third base yesterday, is expected to remain with the Newports until the end of the season, although the Albany club, to which he went from Brockton, is claiming him. Manager Finn signed Shay early in the season and loaned him to Brockton, and the contract is expected to be considered good by the national agreement officials. Albany has no valid claim on Shay, as it took him from the Brocktons when he was under contract to the latter club. Reilley will be retained, to be used in case of an emergency, O'Brien covering short when not in the outfield.

DARKEY DIVERSIONS DOWN IN DIXIE.

An exposition of the Southern cotton fields will characterize the performances to be given at Freebody Park next week, each evening and a Saturday matinee, by J. W. Gorman's Original Alabama Troubadours. This band of Afro-American celebrities is famous throughout this country as exponents of all that is spectacular, musical and genuinely humorous in darkey diversions down in Dixie land. There are buck and wing dancers, jubilee singers, banjoists, plantation dancers, pickaninny dancers, comedians, male and female quartets, old-time plantation scenes, camp-meeting shouters, and prize cake-walkers.

The Portland Argus of a recent date says: Gorman's "Genuine Alabama Troubadours" are making the hit of the season at Riverton Park this week and the largest audiences are witnessing their performances that have been noticed this summer. So great has been the travel the past two days that it has been necessary to take cars from all the city lines to carry the people to the park who were anxious to get there. One of the best features offered by the Troubadors is the Rough Riders' drill and medley of war songs. The manual of arms is illustrated by eight members of the company while another performs the duty of a sentinel pacing to and fro at the rear end of the stage. While executing the different figures of the drill a medley of all the popular war songs is rendered in a splendid manner and an incident that is worthy of special notice is the applause of the audience that is bestowed during and at the finish of "Dixie."

LADIES' FURNISHERS.

Her Majesty's Summer Corset

Widening Its Circle of Friends.

Lots of women, having tired of being constantly annoyed with unstable summer corsets, have turned to Her Majesty's Summer Corset for relief this summer, and found it.

Double as many Her Majesty's have been worn this season as last. It's a wonderful growth, but it is only the natural course of things.

Her Majesty's is the most substantial, the most sensible summer corset ever constructed, therefore it is the most economical. What better can any woman do than wear it?

Miss Marsh, the demonstrator for this corset, is with us for the remainder of this week. This is positively the last time for a free fitting in Newport of this corset.
